MPhil IN MULTI-DISCIPLINARY GENDER STUDIES

Apply now for October
2023-24

Master of Philosophy Degree course. Full-time, 9 months.

The MPhil provides advanced training in gender analysis across the disciplines, with experts from over twenty different departments within the University of Cambridge teaching on topics such as conflict, globalisation, labour market inequality, public policy, history, philosophy, bio-medical advances, experimental psychology, human rights and justice, literature and the arts, culture and antiquity. Students on the MPhil also engage with different theoretical and methodological perspectives including insights from various feminist theories, LGBTQ+ studies, and queer theory.

Recent visiting professors and speakers at the Centre include Bina Agarwal, Sara Ahmed, Seyla Benhabib, Rosi Braidotti, Judith Butler, John Dupré, Nancy Fraser, Jack Halberstam, Sandra Harding, Cindy Katz, Catharine MacKinnon, Juliet Mitchell, Jacqueline Rose, Carol Sanger and Gayatri Spivak.

The course is designed for those students who wish to prepare for PhD or further research and also, for those who want to enhance their understanding of 'gender' by undertaking a 9-month MPhil only. The course is research oriented with a substantial taught component.

Graduates from this MPhil should emerge as highly desirable candidates for international policy, media, corporate, and academic careers.

Applications: We aim to attract high calibre applications from a wide variety of disciplines and backgrounds. For more information about admissions requirements, how to apply and funding sources, please see our website gender.cam.ac.uk.
